

A historical illustration, likely a woodcut or engraving, depicting a surveyor or land measurer. The figure is shown in profile, wearing a cap and a long coat, leaning over a table on a tripod stand. He appears to be using a tool, possibly a compass or a similar measuring instrument, on the table. To the left of the figure, there are several tall, thin poles or flags. To the right, there is a vertical line with some markings and a small, ornate structure at the top. The background is a plain, light-colored surface.

A detailed botanical illustration of a plant branch. The branch is thin and woody, with several elongated, lanceolate leaves attached. The leaves have prominent veins and slightly wavy margins. A thick, gnarled root or stem is visible at the bottom right, from which the branch emerges. The illustration is rendered in a classic scientific style with fine lines and shading.
